About the Winter School

SARA Institute of Data Science helps first-generation learners study data science, statistics and coding. The Winter School brings this mission to life. For five days, you learn by doing, on real data, with a mentor beside you.

This school is for students and researchers in the Social Science and Humanities who want to analyze data with R. R is free and widely used. It is held in an Ambedkarite community space.

What you will learn

Start R from zero

Install R and RStudio, load data and keep your work neat.

Descriptive statistics

Summarize data and make clear publication ready charts.

Inferential statistics

Learn sampling, confidence intervals and hypothesis tests.

Write your report

Turn your results into a clean, shareable, reproducible report.

Who can join

- Master’s, MPhil and PhD students in the Social Science and Humanities
- Researchers and teachers who want hands-on skills
- NGO and policy workers who use survey data
- First-generation learners: 5 seats are fully free

Only 20 seats. Small groups mean you get help when you need it.

02

Your instructor and guests

Dr. Ajay Kumar Koli

Founder & Director of SARA

Dr. Koli will teach all modules of the Winter School. You learn from one teacher for all five days, so every day builds on the last.

- Expertise: Research Methods, Data Analytics, R
- Experience: 10 years of teaching and research
- 20+ research and data science trainings

International guest experts

International experts are invited to give expert talks online. We will announce their names soon. All details will be on the SARA website: https://sara-edu.netlify.app/winter

Sessions will not be recorded. Please join every session live, so you do not miss anything.

How we teach

Small groups

Only 20 participants, so every question gets time.

Learn by doing

Most of each day is practice on data, with mentor.

Free tools

R and RStudio cost nothing. You can practice at home.
